A. Philosophy will give a presentation and start a dialogue among council members

Philosophy motions, PDSA seconds

- Casual intro of club's events in the spring
- 40 in the past—this is 49th
- In general philosophy asks for a pretty significant amount of money
- Theme is Feminist Philosophy of science
    - Helen Longino—presenting her work, case that diversity is important for research
    - Andrea Pitts—presenting their works, philosophy of race, prison, feminist
- Paying for travel, honorarium, it worth it because they are for all students of all majors, great to have this work exposed to all students
- We are giving a platform to different perspectives, especially for marginalized peoples
- Depending on speakers some have asked for much more for their honorarium $1500, total comes out to about $8000---that still does not cover the whole cost, some is covered form other sources
- Are you charging to the other public? No, they like allowing general public to aloe attending
- How much is the total of the current budget? Part of why it's brought up now is to see if council is comfortable, w/ asking for it now or next semester
- How much has philosophy asked for in the past? Around $7000—doesn't want to just drop numbers in us, wants to see if we have input because it comes from funding
- We do get a reduced budget if we do not use up our while budget—we do risk losing fund if they are not completely used
- Is this a one-day event or is it spread out through the week? 9ish until mid-day, two-day event and there are other evening events
- What day were you planning on having the symposium? April soon after spring break
- Is it solidified? Some speakers are solidified for some dates
- Might have an alumni panel, each speaker is going to talk about the same topic but through different perspective, will have time for Q&A
- How many speakers? 6, but their other funds come from other sources
- Doesn't want it to be a surprise, brought up so that other orgs could think about all their events that they had in mind
- What are the topics? The general idea is basis of a book (for Longino) and pointing out an epistemic approach--science is more effective when comprised of a more diverse community, other speakers (Andrea Pitts Latinx feminist philosophy, has worked with Gloria Anzaldua)
- Has philosophy done this before? they had events related to feminist concern, but they are usually very uncommon—they are all women are speakers

B. Abled advocators—personally school needs to uphold support for those with disabilities

- Have they been part of a council before? No, they're a new org
- Have all the values that we do
- In the past they always have very wonderful people involved, they do great work—great events, disability awareness day
- Think about hoe interesting it would be to attend their events and how we could interact with them

- For Philosophy, issues of disabilities are not considered

Vote: All in favor

C. Alpha phi sigma—Honor and promote academic excellence and meet and network in the field of CJ

Phi Alpha Theta motions, UNA seconds

- How long have you been active? they've been on council before, last year they were active for the 1st time in a long time
- How many students? 25-30
- Should you be included, what does this club hope to explore with this council? Theme is mental health, volunteer work, put on workshops, wants to network with other CJ orgs/career specialists
- What other events have they held? Will get the info later, they are new members
- How often do they meet? once a month, twice a month for exec meeting
  - Each year they have a different theme, at end of the semester they present their work at a conference
- CJSA has been active so it's great that the honor society is getting involved
- With mental health they'll be able to bring in a lot more people together
- It's great that they have mental health in mind, are they tokenizing a group? Wouldn't want then to be tokenizing mental health

Vote: All in favor

D. Rebound Scholars: Supports formally incarcerated students, system impacted students, or with no experience in those systems, to support the cause, most students are from H&SS

Rebound Scholars motions, Acacia seconds

- How long have they been active? 2016 but became inactive, reregistered this semester
- Have they planned any events? They do want to connect, in the process of having community service events and mixer
- How many members? They are trying to recruit and maintain members—about 8 members
  - about incarceration info, some do not want to come out as they do not want to be stigmatized no numbers on it
- Cool that they have a program like that, great that students have an opportunity to get involved
- Excited for them
- Knows professor that works with program and they have mentioned that its very fulfilling, that they work hard, and it's great that they want to be here
- Looking forward to working with them and uplifting them

Vote: All in favor
